Jessica tells Filipino fans: I love you all so much

By Narda U. Rueda

SAN DIEGO—For "American Idol" finalist Jessica Sanchez, home is where the heart is—and that's still her hometown, Cebu, where she was born and raised.

Thousands of people turned out to show support for the Filipino-Mexican hit on Saturday (Sunday in Manila) in two good homecoming events—set in a high school stadium and on a historic aircraft carrier—in the "American Idol" tradition of a hero's welcome.

"Thank you for showing up," Sanchez told adoring fans on the flight deck of the USS Midway.

Corona in-laws speak up

'Why were we not asked to bid for BGEI?'

By Ma. Cora P. Dago

WHEN SOME members of the family of the late Mario Basa discussed whether they should come out of the shadows and speak about what they knew then and knew now about Basa-Guidote Enterprises Inc. (BGEI) assets, someone from the younger generation piped in with the saying: "Evil triumphs when good men do nothing."

The BGEI assets are the subject of scrutiny at the impeachment trial of Chief Jus ice Renato Corona.

One of the things the Basa family didn't know then was that Carla Corona-Cañillo, a daughter of Corona, now owns BGEI.

Plus Maria "Flory" Basa-Masculon took the saying as a sign to go ahead. Still, doubts remained. "This [in Thursday] night," she told the Inquirer, "my late aunt, St. Conception Basa of the Franciscan Ministry of Mary (FMM), appeared to me in a dream. She was saying..."

The dream was very vivid, she said, and it gave her courage to tell the Inquirer so that her branch of the Basa-Guidote family, despite fear and intimidation, could say its piece, for whatever purpose it may serve.

"Something inside me was saying that I should help bring out the truth," Flory said.

At one time, Flory said,

DAR told to pay for Luisita lots

By Tawette Oreja

CITY OF SAN PERNANDO—The Supreme Court has ruled that Hacienda Luisita Inc. (HLI) is entitled to just compensation for the lots lost to give to farmers who will now get land as the company's sugar plantations through agrarian reform. In a resolution dated April 24 last released only last week, the Supreme Court said HLI should be paid since the stock distribution program that covered the home and farm lots in 1989 was revised by the Presidential Agrarian Reform Council (PARC) in 2005 to clear the way for land distribution.

Each consisting 240 square meters, the home lots were residential part of the farmers' benefits as shareholders in HLI, a company owned by the family of President Aquino.

'Grandmama's' mystery identity: The quest goes on

By Cary Peterson

(Part of a report)

IT'S DECEMBER 2011. While my husband is busy preparing the dinner he prepared us last as home, I'm in Filma Gascia's place, a mere 15 minutes away, although the several experience I'm about to encounter will make me feel like I'm on a different planet altogether.

Sitting in front of me is this sophisticated—and well-spoken young man. I've never seen him before.

He's a spiritual medium, who believes in generously gifted. This meeting is unplanned; he happens to be available today, and as I have come over to see if he can connect with the spirit of my grandmother. Perhaps he'll tell me why she has been appearing in my dreams, for weeks at a time.

A few feet away, in the adjacent dining room, are two people I trust completely (photos of course, and kindly (Almas). They are here to observe, and give me support.

The medium lights a small white candle and asks me to write up Grandmama's name, birth date and day she passed away. He also asks for my grandmother's photo.

He looks at everything, closes his eyes and appears to be praying. Slowly I say a prayer too.

All of a sudden, I sense something all around me; even the air in the living room feels oppressive and still. And I feel what I can only identify as extreme sadness and pain.

"There is a secret she has been keeping," the medium's voice, gentle yet urgent, catches me. The phrase comes from his chest. "There's also much pain, look at your grandmother's picture, at her eyes. They're talking to you."

Oil firms slash prices; biggest rollback yet

SCOR, OIL companies have slashed the prices of their petroleum products starting yesterday to reflect the continued softening of the international oil market.

Local Petroleum Philippines rolled back prices of diesel by P1.65 a liter and of premium gasoline by P1.50.

Tanoto Petroleum cut prices of diesel by P1.70; premium gasoline by P1.58 a liter and kerosene and regular gasoline by P1.50, effective today. The company said the rollback reflected one of the "biggest weekly movements in the international oil market, which appears to be stabilizing."

Philippine Shell Petroleum Corp., Petro-Phil, Chevron Philippines and Phoenix Petroleum Philippines also rolled back prices of premium gasoline by P1.50 a liter, diesel by P1.60 and kerosene and regular gasoline by P1.50-P1.60 a liter effective today.

Prior to the rollback, the price of diesel ranged from P44.12 to P46.19 a liter, while gasoline varied between P51.85 and P55.57 a liter as of May 8, the year-to-date net increase for diesel and gasoline stood at P1.54 a liter and P4.20 a liter, respectively.

According to the Department of Energy, the decline in global oil prices could be partly attributed to "a bigger-than-expected rise in US crude oil production and expected a slowdown in the American labor market, sparking fears of falling demand in the north's top oil consumer."

Quezon coco farmers not celebrating for San Isidro

By Delle Trinidad Jr.
Inquirer Staff Writer

LAGUNA CITY—The annual colorful celebration of the feast of the San Isidro patron saint, San Isidro, on May 15 has lost its luster to poor coconut farmers in Quezon province, an official of the Coalition of Coconut Farmers of Quezon (Coco Farm) expressed on Monday.

"While the stakeholders together have concentrated against the farmers to bring struggle for the needs of the coconut grower and their working conditions for farmers, from the beginning of the act, there is no reason for them to celebrate," Joseph Guzman, Coco Farm-Quezon secretary told the Inquirer over the phone.

He said the members of the organization and their allies would remember the feast of San Isidro with just a simple feast and prayers for their respective villages.

He said that because of shortage of funds, the farmers also had to share their feast to other people's feast from farmers in Manila as well as for the San Isidro feast to support the national government to finally settle the coconut levy to ease in their lives and resolve the long-pending issue of coconut farmers in Manila.

The farmers, he said, had to prioritize the education of their children who needed to be enrolled this month as soon as the opening of classes.

Guzman also said several nongovernment organizations that have been supporting the cause of the coconut farmers had begged off due to limited funds.

In November, more than 500 coconut farmers from Quezon province, joined by church people and various groups, staged a 300-kilometer march from Laguna to Manila to demand their demand for the return of the coconut fund.

Guzman, however, President Aquino's "uncoordinated march" on the way to his office last November. He said the march was a failure and the government was not ready to accept the coconut levy. He said the government was not ready to accept the coconut levy.

Quezon farmers' organizations in the country have been seeking the return of the levy funds and to acquire the BRC shares of stocks. However, the Aquino administration has not ruled out the second sale of the brownlands.

Meanwhile, the Philippine Department of Agriculture (DA) is reportedly to call in President Aquino and the Department of Agriculture Bureau (DAB) to immediately resolve all pending issues that hamper the long-pending distribution of brownlands in the area, particularly in the 1,778-hectare Francisco Maria in Bataan and San Juan Province and Bataan to San Francisco.

DAOP president Maribel Larios said the offer of the vast hacienda had suffered for so long because they still have to occupy the hacienda needed to develop the BAC.

While the stakeholders together have concentrated against the farmers to bring struggle for the needs of the coconut grower and their working conditions for farmers, from the beginning of the act, there is no reason for them to celebrate," Joseph Guzman, Coco Farm-Quezon secretary told the Inquirer over the phone.

He said the members of the organization and their allies would remember the feast of San Isidro with just a simple feast and prayers for their respective villages.

He said that because of shortage of funds, the farmers also had to share their feast to other people's feast from farmers in Manila as well as for the San Isidro feast to support the national government to finally settle the coconut levy to ease in their lives and resolve the long-pending issue of coconut farmers in Manila.

The farmers, he said, had to prioritize the education of their children who needed to be enrolled this month as soon as the opening of classes.

View TRUE BEAUTY as Sony launches New BRAVIA TVs

New Models – from Entry-Level to Top-of-The-Line – Keep Consumers Connected and Entertained

In life as in art, clarity is needed in order to appreciate an object's true beauty – in order to fully identify, observe its different facets and behold its full figure. It is with this philosophy in mind that Sony Philippines launches the new BRAVIA television line-up at the opening of Shangri-La's Makati Resort and Spa in Davao City. With its theme being Summer, a nod to the season and the festive design of the BRAVIA series, it is now the season for TV.

"Televiewer consumers have told us the role of form and features often creates confusion," said Mr. Takao Kuroda, President and Managing Director, Sony Philippines. "But, we know that the best part of the TV has always been – and will always be – the picture quality. Sony is looking through that rose to make TV buying easier with model lines that have very clear differences, each designed to deliver the most premium, best-in-class picture ever."

Innovations in Picture Quality

The new BRAVIA models offer many of the unique in Sony's built-in design and features. But consumers have come to expect from a Sony TV, complemented by new enhancements and additional innovations. The Dual-core X-Reality PRO picture engine optimizes video sources to offering a vast database of signal patterns and compressing incoming signals into local scenes to display unprecedented detail and enhancing color.

Apart from these, the new BRAVIA line incorporates Sony's latest version of MotionFlow XR technology which reduces blur caused by quick camera movements, enhancing sharpness and creating a smoother viewing experience for fast-paced sports and movie programming, as well as gaming.

"The new BRAVIA series responds to every consumer need – from consumers that demand the highest entertainment experience to those looking for an entry-level yet quality television," notes Kuroda. "Each model continues a tradition of Sony's trailblazing technology to consumers, allowing them to see the true beauty of whatever it is they are viewing."

Select models also incorporate Dynamic Edge LED with local dimming and deliver a brilliant Full HD 1080p picture with increased brightness and outstanding contrast, particularly in best-in-class Deep Black.

The Lineup

As the BRAVIA's flagship model, Sony's HX905 provides cost, the line delivers the most – from Full HD On-View to low-reflection web video. With its increasing number of custom apps built just for it, viewers can explore an abundance of entertainment while maximizing power saving potential through its new eco-friendly features. Design-wise, HX905 carries forward Sony's distinctive Monitor design incorporating "Cooler" Glass by Corning®, allowing for thinner, lighter and stronger screen material.

Meanwhile, those looking for a superb introduction to the 3D excellence should turn to the HX750. Apart from its premium picture quality, it also delivers simple connectivity that opens a variety of entertainment options. Strangely named, the HX750 continues Sony's tradition of including a phone-published edge that adds to the high-class appeal.

Consumers wishing to step into internet connectivity and larger LED backlighting need not sacrifice picture quality with Sony's cut-of-the-line WJ in early 2008. Featuring specially designed dot patterns that is curved around the screen to best focus light, it is the latest in the world's most accurate to a modern home's growing needs.

On the other hand, the KX900450 is the perfect fit for those looking for their first LCD television. A compact entry-level LCD model, it is equipped with Clear Picture Engine that takes viewing to a new level of clarity. The KX900450 series also comes with a 16:9 picture that enables instant sharing of photos, music and videos.

London wary of rooftop missiles plan

Residents question wisdom of putting missiles on buildings during Olympics

LONDON—"It looked like one of those things where you get free pizzas through the post," Hilal Beaktoos said, describing the innocuous-looking leaflet that came through her mail slot recently. "But this was like, pure misadventure."

The leaflet was from the Ministry of Defense, and it boldly informed Beaktoos that her building, Ford Wigg Tower, part of a new building program, was a designated target. Beaktoos said she did not think that a residential apartment building, even one made of concrete and built in the postmodern Italian style of the 1960s, was a suitable place for a pop-up military base. Beaktoos said she did not think that a residential apartment building, even one made of concrete and built in the postmodern Italian style of the 1960s, was a suitable place for a pop-up military base.

The Ministry of Defense says it has not made a final decision on whether to use Ford Wigg Tower, in the borough of Middlesbrough, as a missile site, although "it would be possible to be prepared for the event," said the British Foreign Office spokesman.

In any case, officials say the site is not a missile site.

Beaktoos, not to mention the others if the target is changed to a hotel or a school, the former officer wrote.

David Parnham, the editor of the Daily Express, said the military's decision to use the site is a "pure misadventure."

"This is a deliberately outrageous move designed to make the services seem much more than they are," he said.

"This really would suit the site," he said. "We don't know about it, but it's actually going on under the radar in terms of all kinds of security issues and intelligence operations," he added.

Chris Whelan, who lives in the apartment complex, said he is not a fan of the plan. "I don't know about it, but it's actually going on under the radar in terms of all kinds of security issues and intelligence operations," he added.

"I can see an obvious need to defend the Olympics, but I don't see the need to be in the presence of this way of thinking," he said.

Thousands rage against economic gloom in Spain, UK

MADRID—Thousands of Spaniards today with economic misery and warring bankers against bankers marched on Saturday to mark the first anniversary of the government's "austerity" measures that has sparked similar protests around the world.

The country's Interior Ministry said 70,000 people marched against the government's tough austerity measures in Madrid, Barcelona and six other large cities—but protesters claimed the numbers are much higher.

The apex of the protest was in the capital of Madrid, where at least 30,000 people flooded into the central Plaza del Sol for the evening, waving it away for three days.

Up to 600 people storming the Bank of England killed in London and a Reuters witness said scuffles broke out between some demonstrators and police, with at least 12 arrests.

The indignation and the effort through and "Save the Squares" movement had called for a global day of action against austerity policies and the widening gap between rich and poor, but elsewhere more protests are large as in Spain.

A year after tens of thousands set up a month-long camp in Madrid's central Plaza del Sol against the government's austerity measures, thousands of Spaniards have more reason to be angry about the government's plan to raise taxes on the country's youth in 2013, even as the economy has slipped back in its recovery and one of its largest banks has been nationalized.

Prime Minister Mariano Rajoy's conservative government has passed austerity measures that have hit most social public health and education spending in an effort to repair international markets and avoid a Greek-style bailout.

"We have to stand up and say that we are not going to let them put our backs in the oven for us," they can demand social justice and take away health and education and now they're taking away the future," said Carlos Bernal, 48, a civil servant.

Money for banks, crippled after a 10-year building bubble burst four years ago, is a murky industry for Spaniards, especially after the government took a stake in lender Bankia on Wednesday. "They had our backs but not people," lawyers meet in Getafe, northern Spain, home to Spain's biggest bank Santander. Demonstrations gathered in more than 100 cities across Spain, chanting the slogan that has become a mantra at protests over the past year: "They say it's democracy but it's not."

In central Madrid, more were banded on Saturday to march across the capital to march towards Plaza del Sol, which filled up with people waving flags and chanting in the heat of the sun and drums.

"The situation is getting worse but the best of the protest remains the same: this is a movement of civil disobedience," said Javier Gonzalez, 28, an airline employee and one of the leaders for the Plaza del Sol.

Some 2,000 senior police deployed to prevent protesters from setting up tents in the capital in a repeat of last year's camp-out. Protesters waved their flags of demonstrators in solidarity with the law a movement that has suffered internal divisions.

The group behind the Plaza del Sol movement last May, "Democracia real ya" (Real Democracy Now...really), even organized a formal organization, drawing the focus of the group's reformist politics.

In London, up to 600 people marched through the center of the city, the number doubling in around 200 after the demonstration was called off by the British police.

Protesters around 100 men were hit and five taken to hospital.

"Bank of England, the Bank of Money" is a reference to St. Paul's Cathedral, from which a long-running Orange protest movement has been held in February.

"We're all here to show solidarity with the global movement... groups that are facing against financial repression, political oppression, and that's the only way to change," said one of the protesters.

In Moscow, a few hundred people gathered by the central city pond in an Orange-style protest over the policy of the government to raise the pension age. Protesters also held a demonstration at the headquarters of President Vladimir Putin.

Na, still bogey-free, leads by 1 shot

POPE VEDRA NAZAL, 21, has a record of only three rounds without a bogey at The Players Championship on Saturday, giving him one shot lead over Matt Kuchar as they chase the richest prize on the PGA Tour—a $10-million exemption and a spot in the Ryder Cup.

For all his junior swing and waggles, even purposely missing the ball to be penalized last week, he placed together a brilliant 4-under 68 for a three-round total of 12 under 204. He finished with five birdies on the last three holes to edge ahead of Kuchar 109, who hit the most in this island group 74.

"I know how to play under pressure," he said. "I've won before. I've been in situations like this. I've got to take everything I've learned."

While Fowler, coming off his first PGA Tour win last week at Shell Houston, was dynamic as ever in his shot on the leaderboard, Fowler didn't make a bogey until the last hole but still had the best start of the round on such a hot and wet two-day weekend.

He is trying to become the first player since David Leadbetter in 1997 to win his first two PGA Tour titles in consecutive weeks.

Fowler Open-champion Bubba Watson also played bogey-free. He just didn't have as many birdies, missing from inside 10 feet on his last two holes. For a 76, he was far from behind, along with former Masters champion Zach Johnson (76).

Three Mondays away from chasing the green jacket, Fowler is giving himself plenty of chances.

The card shows two birdies, two bogeys and a 73 that left him 10 shots out of the lead going into the final round.

Bubba Watson plays under pressure.

More 'hot money' seen to make its way to PH

By Ronald M. Domingo

THE RECENT meeting of the Asian Development Bank's Board of Governors held at the Philippine International Convention Center may trigger the flow of more "hot money" into the country.

Analysts say investors have begun to sit up and take notice of Manila according to First Metro Investment Corp. and the University of Asia and the Pacific.

In the latest issue of "Market Call," analysts from the two institutions wrote that global investors would likely take note of the gains made by the Philippines in the past decade as well as the improving outlook in the coming years.

"This will add to an already high liquidity provided by the ever-increasing remittance (from overseas Filipinos)," they said.

Last month, the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas reported that transactions in foreign portfolio investments, or hot money, in March showed a net inflow of $238 million, a turnaround from February's net outflow of $365 million.

BSP, the transactions in March evidenced a decrease in net inflows from the $245 million reported in the same month of 2011.

Also, transactions in the first quarter, 2012, were positive for the first time since the start of the recession.

Pinoys see income from using the Net

Survey says PH users now use the Web for more than just viewing Facebook

By Patrick S. Montville

MORE Filipinos are learning to see and take advantage of the opportunities that the Internet provides in helping people set up businesses and improve their incomes in ways that were not possible in the past.

A survey by multinational technology firm Ericsson said Filipinos browse web sites now use Web 2.0 more than just viewing videos on YouTube or posting photos on Facebook.

"[T]heir] responses were particularly aware of the income opportunities using the Internet could bring," said Vito. In 2003, regional head of Telecom's Consumer

"We've seen a lot of uncertainty in the market lately," Singh said in a recent briefing.

The fact this was driven mostly by the high cost of living in the Philippines, relative to average Filipino's income level.

"Filipinos are increasingly looking for opportunities to improve their quality of life," Singh said. "More and more consumers perceive the Internet and the mobile phone can help create new business or job opportunities." (The added

Entrepreneurs said most Filipinos believe that doing business online was more easier due to the prevalence of the consumer plan, home that allows residents to sell their wares through websites or blogs, and more in pay for those products using other means.

However, the biggest challenge that has kept the Internet from improving the lives of most Filipinos was that the Web remained largely inaccessible to the bulk of the population.

Single-sided this was a result of a combination of the lack of awareness of what the Internet is, expensive rates and poor network infrastructure in countryside areas.

Data from the country's fastest growing showed that only 4.7 million are

BUSINESS CONTINUITY PLANNING

Some achievements, critical issues and challenges

BCP2012 with national and international participants in 2011, an organization must conduct Business Continuity Planning (BCP) so that it can ensure its operations quickly return to a normal state and avoid significant losses.

Most business organizations already have a BCP document although they write it differently (e.g., they write as Disaster Preparedness Plan). But they need to review and improve regularly to address new risks, such as disaster damage.

The plans must also be properly communicated to all concerned and those who may be impacted by the risks. Those who do not have any such plans must do so.

BCP is mainly about planning because the likelihood of probability of some adverse impacts, although not likely, is not zero. As an entrepreneur, I hope, we will have some critical issues and challenges.

The first is the need to improve and update the system and the disaster recovery plan by adding into it risk assessment, risk assessment and risk management.

Risk communication

Often, we talk about management, such as disaster damage, with little or no effort to put risk communication into risk management.

Risk communication is the first step which must also be a continuing process. It should bring awareness, including the local communities, on the disaster risk and the need to take action to reduce the risk. It is a continuous process that will bring about effective risk assessment and risk management.

Media play a major role in risk communication, but must also be used in the Philippines. It is important to have a disaster recovery plan that will bring about effective risk assessment and risk management.

Practical ways to avoid bank fraud, identity theft

By Lili Bontogon-Abrera
Contributor

IN THIS nation, consumers and entrepreneurs have to be on the alert at all times. The fact is, they cannot always rely on the government to protect them and their finances.

When planning to invest, they need to steer clear of personal assets when planning to put up a business or doing business with the government itself, they need to be wary of job security and loans.

The same philosophy applies when transacting with banks—whether personally or online.

Recently, there have been reports of rising complaints about assumed banking practices, some of which include banking into credit accounts and disclosing the details of debts to certain individuals about credit and holders, depositors and those who have assumed themselves of bank loans.

But that's not driving consumers to be cynical, but bank clients can actually avoid being duped by following these practical tips as recommended by Christoff (for "Sentinel Finance"), a website providing money-saving tips and advice on getting out of debt, or better a free.

Review bank statements regularly. Christoff advises clients to review their statements thoroughly and look for statements that appear "skewed." It says statements sent via email should never be deleted.

Keep these statements in a safe, secure place. Hard copies of bank and billing statements and those received via email should be immediately filed.

Otherwise, says Christoff, you could inadvertently leave private information such as the open where guests and extended family members are exposed.

Keep your bank and credit card statements far away from the high-traffic areas of your home. "It's best to keep them hidden in some back-of-the-curtain," it says.

Discard documents that right away. A lot of personal information is floating around on statements and other pieces of mail, so destroy your chances of fraud by throwing it in a quality paper shredder, Christoff advises.

"Old bank statements, checks, and other outdated documents should be discarded regularly. Be mindful of how you store and delete statements on your computers. A hidden email bank statement is a red flag for someone who rummages across your files through a shared connection," it says.

Don't log in at public places. Christoff's is strongly against checking personal information and account details in libraries, coffee shops and other public places.

"While these places try to provide secure transactions, it's no guarantee that someone doesn't break through the firewall and search through your files. That's why you shouldn't have a hidden email bank statement or receive payment do," it says.

In other words, check of other life events which will give no clue to bankers as to the contents of your folders but which you can easily remember.

Never reveal sensitive information. Email messages should not include account numbers, account names, passwords, or PINs, or credit card information.

Christoff says, because email can be altered in a postcard—no, it's not people who send it before it reaches its intended recipient.

Change your password often. Don't use the word "password" in any of your passwords, Christoff says. Most of the time, it's not really hard to guess a password because the more accounts password used in business systems is "password."

Christoff suggests making your password a mixture of upper case, lowercase, numbers and symbols. For added protection, it says, you may change your password every couple of months.

Also, it's a good idea to type your own name and password each time you go online instead of leaving your browser save it for you, Christoff advises.

Its beauty refreshes world-weary travelers

Memories of Switzerland

By Marcel D. Balderon
Guest Writer

AS A NEUTRAL COUNTRY, Switzerland will never be closed to refugees and political exiles from all nations. But that kind of welcoming beauty also serves as a necessary for a great number of travelers who come to enjoy themselves in the bewitching mountains. A vacation in Switzerland will give you more enjoyment relating to the scenery in terms of your experience in one-visit hill and valleys than any other.

Whenever I speak of these lands where I traveled, loved and gained for months, a feeling of nostalgia and sentiment overwhelms me. For every day you travel with the Swiss who travel, the very beautiful Swiss families from Bern, Appenzel, Basel and other also welcomed me with open arms, there is no reason good enough for me not to return to this land of knowledge and wisdom.

not yet in people are not just content with the past, since the modern-day city has to catch up to the present.

As you discover the medieval splendor in its colorful-like street and squares, you also discover the city's almost sacred architecture.

Forward sculptor

Basel is the capital of the half century of Basel-Stadt, Switzerland. Switzerland, Basel is by the Rhine river. It is one of the most popular destinations in this country.

The city is modern yet not designed to preserve some of its "old town" heritage, one of the finest in Europe. The town has picturesque Gothic architecture with magnificent frescoes, early in the case of the market square in front of the imposing 16th-century town hall and the city of St. 27 museum. With its large storage installation, it also serves to be known as "Swiss head of off" as well as its long "Swiss history."

I lived in the city for 50 days in 1984, when I was fortunate to be the first Filipino artist to be granted an artist-in-residence scholarship in the International Artists' Residency Basel, under the sponsorship of the Swiss-German Christoph Merkur Stiftung of Switzerland.

I was fortunate to see 2,000 artworks during my stay in Basel. However, the biggest discovery during my stay was doing my own thing with the works of art.

Typically the famous Swiss sculpture, Tinguely's works are primarily concerned with the movement of machines to create technological sculptures. He, like other art got to the way of "Swiss" style of his construction marks monumental in style and in the performance art.

Outstanding landscape

Basel's most outstanding landscape is Tinguely's famous, a sunny light in front of the Swiss Museum, Basel, if you will, a small pond, a "playful" of metal sculpture, assembled exclusively out of various kinds of metal and concrete.

Like previous art exhibitions, children, the sculpture is entirely away such effect in an outdoor setting of these long-term display with you of water spraying at each figure. I

'The Sound of Music' gets digital updating

By Alyson J. Soslita
Columbia University

RESORTS: WORLD Manda's (EWM) production of the classic Rodgers And Hammerstein musical "The Sound of Music" combines traditional—and reliable—singing and danceography with high digital technology.

Field at the Newport Performing Arts Theatre (NPT), the production makes audiences re-examine the human condition. Of Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein as played live by the Maine Symphony Orchestra (MSO).

Leading the orchestra is MBBBY principal conductor and musical director Rodolphe Cabanac, an alumnus of the USC Conservatory of Music who inspired in French Horn.

Although the orchestra pit is not visible to the audience, video footage of the MBBBY brass performs in French Horn time to time on digital screens screens both ends of the stage.

EWI reveals "The Journal of the

The production features several across carriage, two smaller LED lights are placed at the sides to show alternating low signal level of the sensor and the HRO during their measurements.

While the use of digital graphics is a well-received change in the traditional theater set, the introduction of computer-generated backdrops has as much to be explored in terms of the quality of the graphics used.

The combination of the difficulty of the construction, the live music, and the improvisation—a crucial element in pulling off the production—"Band of Muses" does not disappoint.

Adding severity to the minimal and homogenizing or visual (this is the common design by Francis Kahn, The Hill Architects) minimalist complements the strong colors seen on the discolors, set with the sublimed tones of the sandstone. 'Grandmama's' identity mystery: the quest continues

As this protest continues, a battle rages, clouded by several other issues. The clear intent is to force the other side to the table. Should I laugh or be serious? I get great laughs. He continues, "My grand mother died from an illness. But she is not as young. She's not from here... she needs you to bring her back to her home. She keeps telling me you need to bring her home. To her family."

He closes his eyes for a few seconds as if listening to someone, and starts again. "Her family... there are no of them."

"This happened a long, long time ago," the man says. "How do you know that?" Emily asks. "Because everything looks odd and faded, like there's no color," he responds.

Every time the medium interrupts my thoughts with, "Yes, there's no of them waiting for her." Oh, now he's got it right. I move in the edge of the table.

He turns his head to the side and closes his eyes again. "The family. They were killed... because of the father. The son of the father. There's some kind of curse on the family. Daddy, please, no from previous generations through the father."

Looks like I have begun shaking. He continues his dramatic monologue. "There are angry men. There are many of them... very angry at the father. Killing them, killing the family." I cannot help it, tears are streaming down my cheeks. "Up to earth island. There are Grandmama's."

Kritika 2012: Shaping the next generation of critics

By Michael Carlo C. Villan
University

EPITKA, THE national criticism marketplace, is back.

Melby-Lee, director of the De La Salle University-Immaculate N. Institute Creative Writing Center (ELIIMCWC), says it was conceived as a workshop on art and cultural criticism that responds to the "call for the development of criticism in our country and a need to encourage a healthy atmosphere of mutual exchange and discourse must and is a creative process." It seeks to discover young literary critics in the different zones of the network and attempt to a conversation with each other and with senior critics who will serve as their mentors.

The marketing team on a 10-year hiatus after its initial run in 2003. It was severely revivified under the direction of Richard Inoué, 38.02.2007VC associate professor and dean of the University of the Philippines Diliman College of Mass Communication.

innovation. The workshop is grounded in a multidisciplinary, interdisciplinary approach to art and cultural activities where the artist uses creative ways to enhance an artwork from multiple perspectives.

literature into multiple perspectives.

Weekly-covers literature, film, music, drama, dance, visual arts, architecture, visual multi-art. This year the workshop was held at the University of St. La Salle-Manila (USLM) on April 22-28.

The year's follow-ups were that's free along (Theravada), John Burton (Thera,

Memory and metaphor

The workshop was highlighted by three film screenings with the Ixas Creative Writing Workshop directed this year by BEA White-Jacobsen, guest Marjorie Foxman. These included a screening of "Tom, Flann, Whinn," now on its 30th anniversary and helmed by film critic and the above screening of Film Direct on Peque Gallaga, who was present in a forum with Ixas and KENNEDY followed a craft lecture and poetry reading of De La Salle University poetry reading program.

The papers of the following dealt with very real world issues as E. Gerald Jones' "Napier" (Strong), Miguel Solares' "Bastards" (Quinn), and Isabella Ornela Reyes' "In Transit" (Disrupted), a poetry collection.

Memory and literature, metaphor and class consciousness, and the city as stage for the human condition were among the motifs threaded out in the discourse of these works.

Two papers studied the works of writers from the region outside Florida, namely: Minotaur ("Mergansers" (Chertow) - and a story or poetry by traditional and modern Wintu poets (Silva). The papers focused the readings of the texts within the literary works they were produced. The literary of region/local and common periphery were also discussed.

Regional languages:

Reya Maslins "Independents" (Table 1) and the intersection of Filin's biography and films about the National Hero (Camp) were the subjects of two critical papers. Discussions revolved around the construction of an alternative historical narrative from the point of view of the ex-crying and Filin's biography and film about his life and his political involvement.

Public space is then more analyzed by two papers. The "opening" of cinema space was the focus of controversy in Pao-wei's "Class, Class Rage Quiesce," a study that was in the history of Philippine cinema with the history of its "modernization." Mao's paper centered on the perfect realization of space in the architecture of Taiwan. Quenou

Talk on the visual arts took off from the papers that investigated the visual aesthetic of Modernist artist Diego Rivera and National Artist Carlos "Botong" Francisco (Demetrio), and the controversial installation art exhibit at the Cultural Center of the Philippines titled "Wala," particularly Elidee Cruz's "Politeness" (Indanay). Reading our visual arts within their own terms, necessarily, "where art" and "good art had art" were interrelated.

"Comenius is a different literary genre in itself," stressed Ingeborg Grise, who took the afternoon lecture by saying that it was a literary art form. It is faith, indeed, which makes the writing an artistic act.

The direction of cultural criticism in the Philippines can be summed from the words discussed. There is a call for more creative approaches in the study of art forms and genres that combine the best from two or more faiths of the humanities and the social sciences. There is also a need for dynamism, flexibility and reflexivity on the CRAC's part for a more multidisciplinary to interdisciplinary take on critical discourse.

An anthology is set to gather the works of the 11 young critics and the distinguished panel of critics. The anthology will be edited by Televisa and El Nueve.

Exhibit 2012 is a project of Smithsonian-ACNC, National Commission for Culture and the Arts, and U.S.-Ghana.

What they've learned from their mothers

No such thing as an unanswered prayer

By Carly S. Balas Gubala

I WAS asked as a child the other day, "What are you doing for my first-ever job interview a few buildings away when suddenly a taxiway came to you?"

Just as my mother had done for me 26 years ago, there I was asked in a cab, waiting for my first-ever job interview a few buildings away when suddenly a taxiway came to you.

I suppose, among all the lessons that my mother has taught me, this is the one that I have learned to heart. That in various periods in a child's life, as he or she navigates the road to adulthood (and sometimes, even beyond), it is important for the mother to be there to show her unconditional love and support, and for the child to know and feel that, no matter what happens, there will be there.

to her that no one can love to nurture our children's lives while they are still in our arms so we can prepare them to one day leave the nest and start their own lives.

My mother has always been there for me, but at some point she had to learn to let me go and live my life, make my mistakes as she watched continually from a distance.

I have always been secure in the knowledge that when ever happens, I will have my family of origin to fall back on. The show has been my best friend—what family does not have home away from home? And what mother-child relationship has not gone through rough patches?

Prepared for life

By Fe B. Zamora

AN UNCONVENTIONAL meal of motherhood, I'd say my mother is all about it.

My mother did not impose rigid weekly lessons. Neither did she involve them in her household to break our home-made food menu as 14 siblings, including elementary and high school with her own and several colleges on schedule.

How did that happen? Simple. While other parents were preparing their children for the best opportunities, my mother prepared us for life.

While some parents were teaching and training for their children, my mother exposed us to situations that helped us step out of our own comfort zone and into the real world. She taught us that simple things that we can do every day can make a difference in the lives of others.

From her childhood to Eat vegetables

Fresh vegetables were a regular part of her meals and supper. She was always showing us how to cook them in a healthy way (boiling, steaming, sautéing) and how to eat them.

ASU/USF Senior Lecturer is shown in her home with mother Fe B. Zamora and daughter Marjorie Zamora.

from her growing children, it was natural and simple.

My mother loves vegetables, and influenced us to eat vegetables in all our meals. Asparagus, broccoli, corn, peas, and green beans were common in our meals. My mother also developed a recipe for each vegetable such that it would be a healthy and delicious meal.

My mother is a strong believer in a healthy lifestyle, and with a strong belief in the importance of a healthy lifestyle, she was a strong believer in the importance of a healthy lifestyle.

Take a bath anytime

Just before going to bed, the last time of all. The importance of my mother's teaching was taking a bath or shower regularly before going to bed. And after washing, she would always use her hairbrush to brush her hair. She would also use her hairbrush to brush her hair. She would also use her hairbrush to brush her hair.
